About the Artist: Nir Evron is a video artist and photographer. Born in 1974 in Herzeliya, Israel, he lives and works in Tel Aviv. He graduated from the Bezael Academy in 2001, completed an MFA degree at the Slade School of Art in London in 2005, and was awarded Israel's Minister of Culture prize for a young artist in 2007. He has exhibited internationally in such venues as the Sixth Berlin Biennale, the Tokyo Metropolitan Museum of Photography, and the International Film Festival Rotterdam.

About A Different Kind of Order: The ICP Triennial: Established in 2003, the ICP Triennial is the only recurring U.S. exhibition to concentrate on contemporary photography and video from around the world. The 2013 Triennial, A Different Kind of Order, explores the new visual and social territory in which photography finds itself today. The works in the exhibition reflect the ways that younger artists are imaginatively mixing new forms of digital image-making with the older visual language of painting, sculpture, collage, and cinema.
